Air Canada on its own in NHL flap

- Sponsorship threatened after brutal headshot
- Major sponsors such as Molson Coors, Cisco and Hershey's have chosen to remain silent on issue

Air Canada's threat to hit the NHL where it hurts — in its wallet — proved to be a lonely battle Thursday.

Other sponsors refrained from jumping aboard a public push from the country's leading airline against hockey violence.

The league itself reacted with defiance to a threat by Air Canada. NHL commissioner Gary Bettman suggested his circuit could do just fine if the airline took its business elsewhere.

Air Canada released a letter Thursday where it threatened to withdraw its sponsorship following a violent headshot to Habs player Max Pacioretty by Zdeno Charo of the Boston Bruins.

Other companies took a less aggressive approach.

Tim Hortons has seen its celebrity spokesman — Pittsburgh Penguins superstar Sidney Crosby — sidelined for nearly three months with a concussion.

But the iconic coffee chain wouldn't go as far as threaten its league sponsorship.

Instead, it encouraged "the NHL, the teams and general managers and the NHL Players' Association to continue to work towards addressing concerns with head injuries."

Canadian Tire, for its part, said it is "deeply committed to the passion of the sport, including safe play, skills development and promoting team work."

Air Canada said Thursday it was taking a position at this time to ensure the league acts on violence.

Its threat came after the NHL declined to suspend the Boston Bruins defenceman.

Bettman responded to Air Canada's threat by saying other carriers would step in to replace Air Canada if it no longer wanted the NHL's business.

WestJet Airlines said it has no interest in taking its rival's NHL sponsorship.

Electricity rates to rise another 1%

Ontario Power Generation was given approval Thursday to increase its electricity rates by one per cent, prompting opposition accusations of political interference in the process.

The government-owned utility, which supplies about 70 per cent of Ontario's electricity, had applied to increase the payments it gets from hydroelectric and nuclear stations by 6.2 per cent.

However, the Ontario Energy Board drastically reduced the request.

Ford tightens grip on council

- Mayor hands out cheat sheet to his team before most council votes
- Copy of sheet shows mayor whipping his vote on almost every decision

Of the 15 items scheduled to come before city council Wednesday, members of the mayor's voting bloc were allowed to make up their own minds only twice.

As has been the case with most council meetings since Rob Ford took office, the right-wingers received a "Recommended Voting Strategy" cheat sheet beforehand. These itemized lists include the motion number, a short description of the item, and either a yes, no or open voting option.

"Although there really isn't an option," conceded a member of Ford's executive.

When motions come up that aren't covered on the instruction sheet, Ford's team uses hand signals.

These types of pressure tactics aren't new to city hall. It happened under David Miller and it's been happening under Ford since he took office in December.

But the difference with the current administration is the brazenness in which it is done and the discipline Ford holds over his coalition.

"The Fords talk about running the place like a business but it's been more like a military. My kids would call them control freaks," said Coun. Joe Mihevc. "The risk is that people get tired of being told what to do. And I can tell you, there are a few who admit they're having trouble sleeping at night. This isn't what they were elected to do."

Municipal politics is traditionally a party-free system, where independent politicians are free to vote their conscience.

'Mushy middle'

There are seven councillors who aren't part of Ford's executive team, but who also weren't shut out from committee positions.

1 A chunk of this group also receives the Ford cheat sheet, although not all fall in line on every issue.

2 These councillors have been organizing their own bloc, in hopes of ending the voting pattern.

Airport to be busy for March break getaway

Travellers heading to sunnier climes for March break should be prepared for longer than usual lineups at the airport and at border crossings.

It was expected more than 100,000 passengers would pass through Toronto's Pearson Airport Thursday and another 105,000 people Friday.

On a normal day, about 87,000 passengers move through the airport.

"The best advice is always to call ahead before you come out to the airport to confirm the status of your flight and leave yourself plenty of time," said Greater Toronto Airports Authority spokeswoman Trish Krale. THE CANADIAN PRESS

A positive space for those with HIV/AIDS

Fife House offers housing during a time when there is an increased need, says the executive director

KYLA SERGEJEW
TORONTO@METRONEWS.CA

Allan has been living with HIV for 25 years. Three years ago, when he was at risk of being homeless, Fife House gave him a safe place to get back on his feet.

"I had lost everything and I was seriously ill, I didn't have any support — no family or anything," he said. "I found Fife House thankfully through their homeless outreach program."

The biggest change for Allan (who did not want his last name used), has been having a home that is safe and secure.

"It's provided me with a container to get better," said Allan. "When you're quite sick you can easily be taken advantage of, here I'm able to shut my door and have control over my environment — it's all wonderful, it's really life changing."

Fife House is a community-based agency in Toronto that provides housing and support for people and families with HIV/AIDS and is the recent recipient of the Casey Award, an award that celebrates individuals and organizations that demonstrate leadership in the fields of HIV/AIDS and social justice across Canada.

Executive director Keith Hambly said there is an increasing need for more supportive housing for people with HIV/AIDS.

"If you look at our homeless outreach program there are people who are looking for better housing, who are homeless, who are living in the shelter system — they are not living in a place they can call their home," said Hambly.

Allan said the best thing you can do is ask for help.

"In terms of this reality, the organization is tremendous," he said. "Very non-judgmental, very supportive, and they do what they can and more."

What they do:

- Fife House's homeless outreach program helps more than 350 individuals and families a year.
- Fife House has more than 250 volunteers a year, who provide support services through administration, board governance, and residential programs.
- The agency is Canada's largest provider of supportive residential programming and housing services for people living with HIV/AIDS, with 158 units serving 170 residents.
- Established in 1988, Fife House founders were inspired by the story of George Fife, a lawyer who lost his struggle with AIDS.

Liberals to extend Highway 407

Premier Dalton McGuinty's Liberals hope to pave their way to re-election by extending Highway 407 toward Peterborough within a decade.

As first disclosed by thestar.com Thursday, the governing party will revive the stalled expansion of the toll highway 45 kilometres east to Highway 35/115 with an eye toward the Oct. 6 vote.

The Liberals will push Highway 407 east from Pickering's Brock Road to Harmony Road in Oshawa by 2015 — about 22 km — and then to Highway 35/115 in Clarington by 2020, an additional 23 km.

It is not yet known how much the project would cost. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Provincial coffers

Unlike the existing privately owned 407, the new section would be a public asset so tolls would return to the Ontario treasury.

▶ Case Ootes, the TCHC's new director, says the city can't afford social housing.

Once a critic, now in charge

Case Ootes takes over troubled community housing board
Has said in the past that funding should come from feds and province

Case Ootes, the newly named head of the Toronto Community Housing Corp., has in the past criticized management at the embattled agency and said the city must find a new way to pay for affordable housing.

A veteran councillor who retired last year, Ootes was handpicked by Mayor Rob Ford and approved by council this week to lead the agency.

In the past, Ootes has focused on the fact TCHC owns expensive single-family homes that could be sold to fund repairs and subsidies. He said it showed that council and the housing company were mismanaging the assets.

"To have a family housed in a half-million-dollar home doesn't make a whole lot of sense if you look at the opportunity that you have to convert that asset into a situation where you can provide social housing at less cost, or provide more social housing for the same cost."

Toronto trustees reject video ads in schools

$1,300
Schools would receive $1,300 per year for allowing the ads.

Toronto school trustees voted Wednesday night against a proposal to extend the use of video screens in high schools, a plan that would have included advertising on the monitors.

The screens have been in place, without ads, in four downtown schools in a pilot test for the past year.

They have been running student-generated videos and messages of general interest.

The proposal was to expand the program to 70 schools, and have the screens run advertising one-third of the time.

Schools would receive $1,300 per year for allowing the ads.

A number of trustees opposed the plan, saying students don't go to school to watch advertising, while other trustees say they will try and bring back the proposal in the future.

Hamilton man admits Mississauga stabbing

▶ Jermaine Marlon Scott

A Hamilton man has admitted stabbing a Mississauga father to death in an altercation outside a local pub two years ago.

Reno Woods, 24, pleaded guilty Thursday to manslaughter in the death of 29-year-old Jermaine Marlon Scott.

He is to be sentenced by Justice Bruce Durno March 29, when Crown prosecutor Alex Cornelius provides the agreed facts to the Brampton court.

On March 15, 2009, a dispute started inside the Fox & Fiddle pub on Dundas Street West, near Winston Churchill Boulevard in Mississauga. It then spilled out on to the street.

Outside the pub, Scott started running from a group of men, all strangers.

As several men chased him, he was stabbed but managed to get into a taxi. The driver called 911. Scott died later in hospital.

Known to his friends as "Pete" because he liked the Peter Parker character from Spider-Man, Scott was the father of a 12-year-old boy.

Earlier this week, another man charged in the slaying, Jerome Marshall, 24, pleaded guilty to assault.

Both men, along with two others, were initially charged with second-degree murder.

Robert Woods, 22, Reno's brother, was "discharged" following a hearing last year.

A murder charge against Lani Harris, 22, of Woodbridge was also withdrawn earlier this year. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TTC calls back Gunn

He will look at budgets, staffing, service ‘There’s no magic to this thing,’ he says He admits mayor phoned, but won’t say if it’s long term

Transit guru David Gunn is riding in to help the TTC.

The transit system has called him in to review its 2012 budgets.

Gunn, who ran the TTC from 1995-99 after stints in New York and Washington, is expected to arrive for a week later this month at the invitation of the current chief general manager, Gary Webster.

He has agreed to work for free, although his expenses will be covered.

He will “look at the head count, organizational structure, the service (the TTC has) added,” he said from his retirement home in Cape Breton.

He confirmed he received a call from Mayor Rob Ford, who needs to find $774 million to balance the budget next year.

But Gunn wouldn’t say whether Ford asked him to come back on a permanent basis.

Burlington firefighters hunt lost $50,000

An individual is being investigated over the disappearance of about $50,000 from the Burlington Professional Firefighters Association, the union’s president says.

Dan VanderLelie said he wants to make it clear the missing money was not raised for charitable causes. “This person did not have access to what we call our benevolent fund,” he said Thursday.

These are just allegations and police have not been called in, he added.

“We want to do our own internal process first.”

He said the alleged misuse of funds involved union dues going back years.

VanderLelie would not identify the individual or the position held, but a source said the person was a former treasurer.

“This has been hard on this association and all the brother and sister firefighters here,” VanderLelie said.

No ham on the lam in old-time Pickering

It’s all there in faded brown and yellowed white in a leather-bound book whose first entry is March 4, 1811.

“Hogs is not to run at large,” begins the bylaw, “without they have a yoak (sic) on them that is six inches above the neck and fore (sic) inches below the neck.”

Such were the issues of the day in Pickering 200 years ago. March 4, 1811, was the first meeting of the township’s council of a dozen men.

“Their power was very limited in those days,” says Katrina Pyke, Pickering’s co-ordinator of museum operations.

“They didn’t have what we know as democracy.”

The book, on display at city hall until April 15 as part of the city’s bicentennial celebrations, was used to record bylaws, tax assessments, property ownership and livestock branding up to 1883.

Back in 1811, the population numbered 180, half of whom were children with names like Obadiah, Electra and Zotes. Their parents were largely subsistence farmers.

So it’s no surprise that the first bylaw decreed that fences “be four feet and a half high and not more than five inches between rails” to keep wildlife out and smaller livestock in. Pigs more than 40 pounds and cows could roam, but bulls with cows on their mind were kept confined.

Gadhafi forces pound rebels into retreat

JOHN MOORE/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Rebels fire a rocket-propelled grenade Thursday at a Libyan air force fighter jet in Ras Lanuf, Libya.

Setback for ragtag forces of armed civilians, mutinous army units that had confidently charged west

With fierce barrages of tank and artillery fire, Moammar Gadhafi's loyalists threw rebels into a frantic retreat from a strategic oil port Thursday.

The rout came as the U.S. director of national intelligence stressed that Gadhafi's military was stronger than it has been described and said that "in the longer term ... the regime will prevail."

Hundreds of rebels in cars and trucks sped eastward on the Mediterranean coastal road in a seemingly disorganized flight from Ras Lanuf as an overwhelming force of rockets pounded a hospital, mosque and other buildings in the oil complex. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Recognition

The opposition, however, made some diplomatic gains.

- France became the first country to recognize the rebels' eastern-based governing council.
- U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said she would meet with opposition leaders in the U.S., Egypt and Tunisia.

Harper weighs in on hockey hits in the NHL

But prime minister feels the government needs to take action and focus on safety with children's sports

Prime Minister Stephen Harper says he is concerned about the growing number of serious injuries in the NHL.

An avid hockey fan, Harper says the league needs to take a serious look at the issue.

He made the comments in the wake of the devastating hit that placed Montreal Canadiens forward Max Pacioretty in hospital with a severe concussion and fractured vertebra.

"I just say this as a hockey fan, I'm very concerned about the growing number of very serious injuries, and in some cases to some of the premier players in the game," Harper said Thursday.

"I don't think that's good for the game and I think the league's got to take a serious look at that for its own sake."

Other than to send his thoughts to the injured Pacioretty, Harper declined to comment specifically on the hit, saying it's not the government's job to get involved.

"Obviously, I want to express sympathy to Mr. Pacioretty, his family, his teammates," he said. "We're all very concerned about his health and I hope to see him have a full recovery and get back on the ice."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Background

The NHL did not suspend or fine Boston captain Zdeno Chara for the controversial hit.

- Commissioner Gary Bettman called Pacioretty's injury horrific, but said it's part of the game.
- After receiving numerous phone calls, Montreal police have opened a criminal investigation into the hit.
- Air Canada has threatened to withdraw its sponsorship unless the NHL moves to reduce the incidence of serious injury.

Rally. For freedom

▶ Tibetan supporters hold a day-long rally outside the Chinese consulate Thursday in Vancouver.

JONATHAN HAYWARD/ THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tibetans seek end to China's rule

The rally commemorates the 52nd anniversary of the Tibetan uprising. Meanwhile, Nepalese police broke up a protest of more than 1,000 Tibetan exiles demanding an end to the Chinese rule in their homeland.

Feds appeal sex-trade ruling

The federal government is arguing Parliament doesn't have an obligation to "maximize" the safety of sex-trade workers.

This is just one argument Ottawa is advancing in an appeal of a ruling striking down three key prostitution laws.

In September, an Ontario Superior Court judge ruled laws against keeping a common bawdy house, communicating for the purposes of prostitution and living on the avails of the trade were contributing to the danger faced by prostitutes.

The government says prostitution itself is what puts sex-trade workers in danger and the laws actually try to discourage people from choosing to get into prostitution.

Ottawa also argues the lower court erred in assuming Parliament has an obligation to "minimize hindrances and maximize safety" for people in such activities.

Dalai Lama to end political role

Chinese foreign ministry spokeswoman Jiang Yu calls the Dalai Lama's talk of retirement deceptive

ASHWINI BHATIA/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶Dalai Lama

The Dalai Lama said Thursday that he will give up his political role in the Tibetan government-in-exile and shift that power to an elected representative, as the 76-year-old Tibetan Buddhist spiritual leader struggles with growing worries about who will succeed him when he dies.

Speaking on the anniversary of the failed 1959 uprising against Chinese rule in his Himalayan homeland that sent him into exile, the Dalai Lama said the time had come "to devolve my formal authority to the elected leader."

While he has long said that he wants the exile government to take on some of his powers, Thursday's announcement appeared to mark the beginning of a countdown. The Dalai Lama said he would propose amendments to the exile constitution during the parliament's next session, which begins March 14 in the Indian hill town of Dharamsala where the exiles are based.

A new prime minister will be elected a few days later, and the timing indicates the Dalai Lama may want that premier to take up his political duties.

The Dalai Lama is believed to be in fairly good health, but China's continued heavy-handed rule over Tibet has made the succession question all important within the Tibetan community.

Despite more than a half-century in exile, the Dalai Lama is still revered by most Tibetans as their traditional king and spiritual leader. Many worship him as a near deity. He is the 14th person to hold the title in a tradition stretching back 500 years, with each Dalai Lama chosen as a child by senior monks through a series of mystical signs. Each is believed to be the reincarnation of his predecessor.

Tories shot down

Stinging report on cost of F-35 may fuel election speculation

The parliamentary budget officer accused the Harper government Thursday of low-balling the cost of the F-35 stealth fighter deal.

In an incendiary report likely to further stoke election speculation, Kevin Page estimated the entire package will cost taxpayers $22.6 billion over 20 years.

The total price tag for the 65 high-tech fighters could reach $29.3 billion if maintenance costs are extended over another 10 years to cover the full, expected service life of the aircraft.

"I'm not going to get into a lengthy debate on numbers ... this is the only fighter available that serves the purposes that our air force needs."
STEPHEN HARPER TALKING TO REPORTERS IN TORONTO

The government continued to insist it expects the cost to run between $14 billion and $16 billion.

But Page said those numbers are based on outdated information from the manufacturer and a healthy dose of wishful thinking.

Meanwhile, the public is kept in the dark.

"I don't think they've been transparent," he said.

Page said there is significant risk to the federal treasury and he doesn't believe the Conservatives have set aside enough money in their long-term defence plan.

The report, which was reviewed by independent experts in the U.S., Britain, Australia and Canada, picks apart the government's numbers and assumptions in just about every aspect of the fighter program.

▶ Defence Minister Peter MacKay, in the cockpit of an F-35, has said killing the purchase would cost $1 billion. But the budget chief's report contradicts him.

Liberals attack

The Liberals asked Kevin Page to look at the cost of the entire deal.

▶ "The Conservative figures just don't add up," said Marc Garneau, the Liberal industry critic.

'No binding contract'

Defence Minister Peter MacKay has said killing the purchase would cost $1 billion in lost benefits.

But the report said there are no penalties.

"Canada has not signed any binding contract," the report said.

Cop under scrutiny in Assange case

Julian Assange's Swedish lawyer says a newspaper report casts doubt on whether the sex abuse investigation against the WikiLeaks founder was carried out in an impartial manner.

Swedish tabloid Expressen reported Thursday that a police officer involved in the initial phase of the probe had personal and political links to one of the two women accusing Assange of sexual misconduct.

Expressen also said the officer, Irmeli Krans, described Assange as a "bubble ready to burst" on her personal Facebook page.

If true, Assange's lawyer says, a trial could be unfair.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Background

After releasing thousands of secret U.S. diplomatic cables, WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange was charged with sexual assault by two women in Sweden.

After his arrest in Britain, Assange was released on bail. Court later ruled he be extradited to stand trial in Sweden.

Afghanistan: Best friends die same day

Dozens stood silently — some with dogs at their feet — as soldier's friends and family laid roses atop black hearse carrying his coffin

Liam and Theo were a team, fast friends performing a dangerous job — searching out roadside bombs laid by insurgents in Afghanistan.

The jovial British soldier and his irrepressible dog worked and played together for months, and died on the same day.

On Thursday, they came home together, flown back to Britain in a sombre repatriation ceremony for the soldier remembered for his empathy with animals and the companion he loved.

Lance Cpl. Liam Tasker, a dog handler with the Royal Army Veterinary Corps, was killed in a firefight with insurgents in Helmand Province March 1 as he searched for explosives with Theo, a 22-month-old bomb-sniffing springer spaniel mix. The dog suffered a fatal seizure hours later at a British army base.

Military officials won't go so far as to say Theo died of a broken heart — but that may not be far from the truth.

"I love my job and working together with Theo. He has a great character and never tires. He can't wait to get out and do his job and will stop at nothing."

LANCE CPL. LIAM TASKER SAID IN A PROFILE OF THE PAIR RELEASED BY THE MINISTRY OF DEFENCE BEFORE HIS DEATH

"I think we often underestimate the grieving process in dogs," said Elaine Pendlebury, a senior veterinarian with animal charity PDSA. "Some dogs react very severely to their partner's loss.

"The bonding that I have seen between soldiers or police and their dogs is fantastic. When you see them working together, it's really one unit."

A military Hercules plane carrying Tasker's body and Theo's ashes touched down Thursday at a Royal Air Force base in southwest England.

Is democracy a 'distraction' for the Tories?

Commons Speaker slaps down government over violations But Harper says: Focus on the economy

The Harper government is dismissing a pair of stinging parliamentary violations as a "distraction" and a "game."

Commons Speaker Peter Milliken has ruled that the government and International Co-operation Minister Bev Oda are in breach of parliamentary privilege.

But Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Thursday that opposition politicians should be focused on the economy rather than this week's rulings.

Government House leader John Baird went further, accusing the Liberals of being caught up in a "distraction" rather than what Canadians really care about.

The Milliken file

Peter Milliken ruled on two subjects in the headlines.

- One: He found the government breached the rights of parliamentarians by failing to produce all documents on the cost of crime legislation and corporate tax cuts.
- Two: He found that Bev Oda breached parliamentary privilege by providing inconsistent testimony about the alteration of a document.

That prompted an indignant Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff to express shock that the Conservatives consider democracy to be a distraction.

The Liberals, NDP and Bloc Québécois are speaking out against what they say is an abuse of power and lack of respect by the Conservatives for democratic institutions.

The battle could be the core theme of the next federal election.

Meanwhile, a Commons committee meets for three days next week to consider what to do about the Speaker's ruling.

Prince Andrew's sex-offender friend landed private plane at RAF base ◗ Reports of meetings with Gadhafi

Revelations about Prince Andrew's dodgy dealings with convicted sex offenders and dictators have skidded from embarrassing to job threatening.

After more than two weeks of near-daily disclosures, Andrew was summoned to Buckingham Palace for a chat with the Queen.

"I understand that she asked him if any more stories are going to come out in the next few days," the Daily Mail reported a senior aide as saying.

"If the answer was 'yes,' then his position will be untenable. I suspect he will make a decision in the next 48 hours or so."

The stories did keep coming.

On Thursday, the Daily Telegraph reported that convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein landed his private jet at a Royal Air Force fighter base on Dec. 7, 2000, en route to a visit with Andrew at Sandringham, the Queen's estate in Norfolk, England.

Civil aviation authorities called it "unusual." The ministry of defence said it was routine.

The Guardian, meanwhile, quoted a Labour MP describing the Duke of York's efforts to lobby the British government for trade deals with Azerbaijan, a country accused of torturing protesters.

Andrew has visited Azerbaijan seven times since 2005; an eighth trip is scheduled for June.

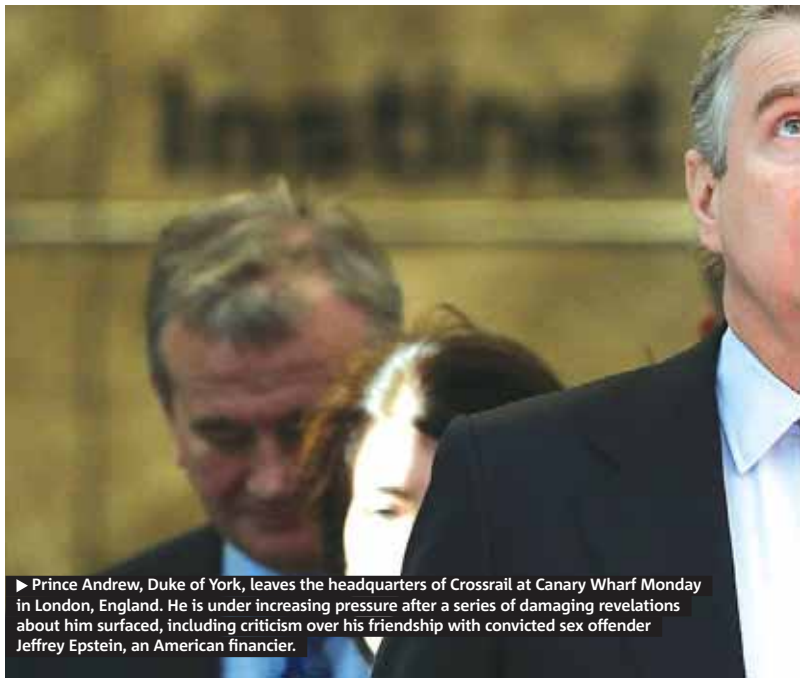
"He feels it is a Cinderella country that has tremendous opportunities," said Tory MP Mark Field, target of the Duke's lobby.

TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Sketchy stories

Recent disclosures about Prince Andrew include:

- Three meetings, some private, some official, with Libyan dictator Moammar Gadhafi and at least two with his son, Saif.
- Pictures of Andrew with his arm around teenage prostitute Virginia Roberts at Epstein's Palm Beach mansion, where he was a frequent guest. Roberts has alleged she was Epstein's "sex slave" at age 15.
- A WikiLeaks revelation in November of a very jolly Andrew, or "HBH, His Buffoon Highness" as diplomats call him, regaling businessmen with tales of corrupt, stupid and backward "foreigners."



▶ Prince Andrew, Duke of York, leaves the headquarters of Crossrail at Canary Wharf Monday in London, England. He is under increasing pressure after a series of damaging revelations about him surfaced, including criticism over his friendship with convicted sex offender Jeffrey Epstein, an American financier.

'More fuel for the fire'

Prince Andrew's peripatetic "unpaid" trade representative job, which embellished his "Air Miles Andy" nickname, cost the U.K. government $971,000 last year for travel, hotels, food and hospitality, the Telegraph reported.

The 51-year-old Duke also gets a $390,000 annual stipend from his mother.

"It's more fuel for the fire," Graham Smith, head of the monarchy abolition group Republic, told the Toronto Star Thursday.

"He should be sacked. Anybody else would be by now. It's only because of the Queen that he hasn't been." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Ex-integrity boss decries critical report as unfair

Ouimet bullied, intimidated her staff and failed to fulfil her mandate to protect public service: Document

Disgraced integrity commissioner Christiane Ouimet says the auditor general's report that led to her surprise resignation last fall was neither fair nor accurate.

Testifying under oath, with her lawyer by her side, Ouimet told a House of Commons committee that auditor general Sheila Fraser's December report was flawed.

"I'm here to point out that there are serious flaws and erroneous facts that have attacked my reputation," she said Thursday in her first public statement since the controversy over her departure erupted.

Ouimet resigned with a lucrative severance package two months before the report was released.

"I lost seven years income, seven years pension. I lost my reputation."
CHRISTIANE OUIMET

Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Thursday federal lawyers advised that the best way to hasten her departure was to pay her more than $500,000 in a separation agreement that bound her to secrecy.

Some of her former staff who quit because of conditions in her office have complained that Ouimet got a golden parachute while they gave up benefits. She denied, however, that her deal was overly generous.

She said she received death threats and her health suffered due to Fraser's extensive two-year investigation of her office.

When the government presented her with a "non-negotiable" offer to quit with a separation allowance, she reluctantly accepted it.

The report found that 228 allegations of wrongdoing or complaints of reprisals against whistleblowers were brought to Ouimet's office during her three-year tenure. However, only seven were investigated and no findings of wrongdoing were ever made. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's young workers at risk, says CAW president

The head of Canada's largest private sector union is warning that many of the country's youngest workers face unsafe conditions on the job.

Canadian Auto Workers president Ken Lewenza says young workers are often unaware of their rights, including the right to refuse unsafe work.

His warning comes after retail grocer Metro Ontario was fined $350,000 this week for an Occupational Health and Safety Act violation that caused the death of a 17-year-old worker.

The union said in a release that the young worker, who was a CAW member, had only been on the job for a few weeks.

10K Ontario government statistics show that each year more than 10,000 workers under the age of 25 are injured on the job and are unable to return to work the next day.

The Ministry of Labour said the fatal accident occurred in August 2009 at a Mississauga Metro store on Erin Mills Parkway.

The ministry's report said the teen was told to remove a box from on top of a drop ceiling but when the worker stepped onto the ceiling, he fell through and suffered a fatal head injury.

"Employers are failing in their responsibility to ensure young workers are safe on the job through comprehensive health and safety training," Lewenza said in Thursday's release.

"The retail sector is a major employer in this country, but we've seen conditions gradually erode, where there is much higher staff turnover due to erratic shift scheduling, limited health and safety considerations, and poor wages and benefits." THE CANADIAN PRESS

BAUER'S POWER

- Legendary hockey outfitter survives first day of public trading
- Seeks brand expansion to girls' hockey, lacrosse, the United States

Bauer Performance Sports says its sales will grow as it invests in research and development for new gear to protect hockey players, amid hot debate over concussions in the NHL.

Kevin Davis, Bauer's CEO, spoke in Toronto Thursday as Bauer began life as a publicly traded company.

Trading got off to a bumpy start, with newly listed shares falling five cents below their issue price of $7.50 as markets declined in Canada and the United States.

Still, Bauer is the biggest player by far in the hockey equipment market, and Davis says the company will spend money on creating new products to expand its sales rather than focus on selling more of its existing gear.

"The industry can grow when new innovation comes in."
KEVIN DAVIS, CEO, BAUER PERFORMANCE SPORTS

One example is neck protectors, a required piece of equipment for almost two-thirds of the one million children around the world registered in youth hockey.

"The current solution was really big and bulky and hot and kids didn't like to wear it. So we integrated it with our base layer shirt and it's a new product for us," Davis said.

"That's a product that didn't exist last year," he added.

In the past three years, Bauer has acquired Mission Roller Hockey and Maverik Lacrosse to expand sales into other sports.

He said the company is also making changes to its helmets, but wouldn't reveal new features.

Helmets are a hot issue as several star players, including Sidney Crosby, are sitting out much of the season owing to concussions. The website theconcussionblog.com estimates 72 NHL players have been sidelined because of the head injury this season.

The hockey equipment industry shows some potential for increased sales.

Hockey Canada estimates fewer boys will enrol in hockey this year, but says sales to women, girls and new Canadians show opportunities for growth. Russia, too, is an expanding market.

Founded in Kitchener in 1927, Bauer developed the first skate with a blade permanently attached to a boot.

The company focused on skates until 1990, when it acquired the hockey assets of another Canadian hockey legend, equipment maker Cooper Canada Ltd.

In 1995, Bauer was bought by Nike Inc. for $430 million.

Nike sold the company for $200 million in 2008 to U.S.-based private equity firm Kohlberg & Co. and Roustan Capital, a firm owned by Quebec-born businessman Graeme Roustan .

The private-equity investors hold a two-thirds stake in the company following Thursday's initial public offering.

Does iPad 2 live up to the hype?

With Friday's release of the iPad 2 in the United States, Apple is further widening the gap with its rivals. The new iPad looks much like the first one, but has a sleeker, lighter body with a curved back.

All this helps the tablet fit more naturally in the hand, and makes it easier to hold for extended e-reading sessions.

Among the most noticeable changes is the inclusion of cameras, one on the front and one on the back. Both cameras work with Apple's FaceTime video chat application and the back camera shoots high-definition videos that are shown to advantage on the iPad's crisp display, measuring 25 centimetres diagonally.

The iPad 2 has Apple's new dual-core A5 chip, which helps applications open more quickly than on the older iPad. Add to that a new version of Apple's iOS software for faster web surfing and video loading.

The new software also lets users share music and videos from their iTunes library on multiple Apple devices such as the iPhone and iPod Touch on the same Wi-Fi network.

Apple's advantage: Price the iPad low

JEFF CHIU/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

▶ Coming to Canada March 25: iPad2.

The new iPad hitting U.S. stores Friday (and slated for Canadian release March 25) comes with several improvements over the original but the same price tag, hobbling efforts by rivals at breaking Apple Inc.'s hold on the emerging market for tablet computers.

Competitors can't seem to match the iPad's starting price of $499 US. Comparable tablets cost hundreds of dollars more, while cheaper tablets tend to be inferior in quality.

Usually, the early products in consumer electronics, such as the first Blu-ray players or digital cameras, are expensive. Competition then gradually brings prices down. With the iPad, the reverse is happening, spelling trouble for competitors.

It's rare for prices to start low and stay low, yet it looks as if that's exactly what Apple intended. Apple appears to have chosen, right from the start, to make less of a profit from its iPads than it does from iPods and iPhones. That's an odd move for a company that isn't known for cheap products.

Apple's profit margin on the entry-level iPad model is about 25 per cent, according to an estimate by Toni Sacconaghi at Bernstein Research in New York.

By contrast, the company's profit margin for all products, before corporate overhead, was 38.5 per cent in the most recent quarter. Sacconaghi and other analysts estimate the margin for the iPhone 4 is 50 per cent to 60 per cent. (Apple charges about $600 US for it, though it's cheaper in stores because wireless carriers subsidize it.)

Apple is telling investors to expect overall margins to keep declining, meaning competitors can't expect much of a reprieve.

Analysts say Apple has a couple of advantages that let it sell an iPad profitably at a price that would put another manufacturer at break-even, or at a loss.

Apple sells about one-third of iPads in its own stores and from its website. By cutting out the middleman, Apple is able to keep more of the slim profit margin for itself.

Also, the iPad uses many of the same chips as the iPhone and iPod. That means Apple is able to buy them in huge quantities, bringing down costs.

5 MINUTES WITH: SANJAY BURMAN

The hypnotherapist and micro-gesture expert has transferred his ability to read people into the celebrity world. Tom, Angelina: Your number is up.

What have you observed about the majority of people as we unconsciously gesture through our day?
We like to control how we want to be seen, but our body language reveals exactly who we are. The best is people shaking their head "no" when telling you something affirmative. (Shaking his head): "I totally had a great time with you; I was so busy, I couldn't call you back."

Has your ability to read people's body language messed up your love life at all?
(Laughing) Totally. (The women) almost become schizophrenic. They start to play with their knives and they don't know which direction they should put it in. And then the thing is: "Are you hypnotizing me right now?" And you're thinking, what the hell is she talking about? I just asked her if she has a dog.

You just published a new celebrity-focused book on reading body language. Who's your favourite celebrity to analyze?
Politicians are the best at it. That's why I love Rob Ford. That guy had nothing to hide and he would always sit with his arms open, open-chested, and he would just wait it out, because he knew no matter what you came at him with, he would just use honesty back. Whereas you look at (George) Smitherman, he always sat with his hands in front of his chest, hunched over the desk; he was fidgety. He was always hiding something.

Who have you found to be the most self-aware or unaware?
Madonna is one of the worst. I think she has a lot of unhappiness inside of her. When she talks, she blinks a lot because she's often covering up what she really wants to say.

Have you gathered any general axioms about celebrity culture through your research?
I think that a lot of them lie. Not necessarily because they want to, but because they think they have to for their careers. I know someone who was sitting beside Tom Cruise and Angelina Jolie at a conference, and he said looking at the two of them, there's just nothing in their eyes. It's a blank stare. They're trying to find happiness by being in the spotlight, and they think that's all they have anymore.

Living life to its fullest

Worth mentioning

The pattern of aging in humans is not too different from most other primates, such as chimpanzees, monkeys and baboons, new research shows.

A team led by Anne Bronikowski of Iowa State University studied data on primate aging collected over decades around the world and compared it with statistics on modern Americans. Some experts have thought that because people have relatively long lifespans, humans aged differently from other mammals.

The research team believed that any major difference between humans and primates was most likely to show up with modern people, rather than a hunter-gatherer culture, Bronikowski said.

"And the fact that we don't find a difference there is more compelling."

The basic pattern they found is a relatively high risk of dying in infancy, a low risk of death during the juvenile years and then an increased risk of dying as aging progressed. Also, they found that in most cases males don't live as long as females.

"Human patterns are not strikingly different, even though wild primates experience sources of mortality from which humans may be protected," the authors wrote in a study published online Thursday in the journal Science.

▶ Mars Needs Moms has some great animation that sometimes makes its human characters look almost "too real." Mars Needs Moms opens today.

RICHARD CROUSE & MARK BRESLIN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

A fun trip to Mars

- Richard Crouse and Mark Breslin debate the merits of Mars Needs Moms
- Action-adventure story lifts animated film, but not quite to WALL-E's level

Richard Crouse: Mark, I think WALL-E is the pinnacle of science fiction for kids and after seeing Mars Needs Moms ... I still feel that way. It's not really sci-fi anyway, it's more action-adventure in zero gravity, and a pretty good one. But despite some good animation it didn't feel memorable to me. What did you think?

Mark Breslin: Well, Richard, I dreaded seeing it. To fully appreciate this picture, you have to be an eight-year-old boy, and my inner child ran away from home a long time ago. But I was pleasantly surprised — and a bit angry. The poster and title indicate that the movie is a comedy for little kids. But it's not. Parents of very young children should be aware that it is an action-adventure, as you say, with themes about kidnapping and abandonment, and some scary chase scenes.

Plot synopsis

- The Earth-bound portion of the story is set in Anywhere, USA. Little Milo (Seth Green) doesn't like taking out the garbage. When his mom gives him a firm, but effective talking to, she unwittingly becomes a Martian overlord's first choice as the model mom for the nanny bots that raise that planet's young'uns. When she is abducted, Milo hitches a ride, determined to rescue his mom from the alien invaders.
- Ratings:
  Richard: ⊕⊕⊖
  Mark: ⊕⊕½

RC: I too dreaded having to sit through this, a feeling that didn't go away until the story really kicked in around the half-hour mark. The Earth-bound portion of the movie bored me silly but once the movie hits Mars it perks up. The female Martians look like ET's younger sisters and the animation is terrific. I think it will appeal to eight- or nine-year-olds, but as you say anyone younger than that might find it a bit intense.

MB: I got into it as well. But I must say the animation unnerved me. It's getting to the point where the human characters looked creepily all too real, especially in longshot. On the other hand, it's nice to see John Candy working again. Richard?

RC: I can only half agree with you on the animation. I thought the backgrounds on Mars were spectacular, kind of 2001 by way of Triumph of the Will and Brazil, but, for me, the character animation fluctuated. Milo's mom had a not-quite-human feel about her, but Milo and his friend Gribble look amazing. And you're right about John Candy. I couldn't help but think that Dan Fogler's Gribble is the part Candy would have played if this film was made in 1990.

MB: Animated movies often entertain children and their parents in different ways and on different levels, but in this movie the pop culture references of the Pixar films or of Shrek are nonexistent. But I must admit I did laugh when Gribble's mechanical dog threw up nuts and bolts.

Pegg, Frost live out lifelong dream

British comedy pair play comic book nerds on the search for aliens in Paul First Hollywood movie for stars of Shaun of the Dead and Hot Fuzz

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

It's time for Shaun Of The Dead and Hot Fuzz fans as well as all open and closeted nerds to rejoice. Simon Pegg and Nick Frost return next week with Paul.

The longtime friends and collaborators co-wrote and star in a new film about a pair of British comic book geeks who embark on a USA/UFO road trip from Comic-Con and end up befriending an alien. Despite having co-starred several times in film and television before, the movie marks the first time the pair have written together.

"Funnily enough, since we met about 17, 18 years ago we always wrote little things together that never came to fruition," Pegg told Metro. "Paul was our chance to finally do something and finish it. It became a point of honour to get it done. There were days where we were literally apoplectic with laughter lying on the floor crying our eyes out over stuff that didn't even end up in the script."

"I think that we've managed to hopefully write a love letter to Steven Spielberg and the fan boys on one hand and on the other hand make something which is slightly more accessible for everyone to watch, even women."
NICK FROST

The film also represents the first time the pair worked within the Hollywood studio system and though they admit that means they had to slightly curb their sensibilities to play to a broader audience, they were able to still maintain their distinct comedic voice.

"I always use the phrase, you mutate to survive," said Pegg with Frost jokingly adding, "I think that we've managed to hopefully write a love letter to Steven Spielberg and the fan boys on one hand and on the other hand make something which is slightly more accessible for everyone to watch, even women."

Though Paul should appeal to a wider crowd, Pegg and Frost know that their core fanbase shares their pop culture obsessions and certainly know how to appease them. In fact, when they debuted footage from Paul at last year's Comic-Con there was actually a stabbing in the audience.

"They were fighting over seats at our panel," explained Pegg. "That was simultaneously horrifying and flattering."

McConaughey enjoyed playing the sleezy lawyer

ADAM NAYMAN
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

▶ Matthew McConaughey stars in The Lincoln Lawyer, which opens next Friday.

It's been 15 years since Matthew McConaughey had his first major role in Joel Schumacher's 1996 thriller A Time to Kill. In that film, McConaughey played an idealistic young defence attorney with right on his side — a far cry from his role in Brad Furman's new legal drama The Lincoln Lawyer, where he's more of an opportunist than a crusader.

"You can get away with a bit more," says the 42-year-old actor when asked if the part of Los Angeles criminal defence attorney Mickey Haller — a guy who happily defends the guilty if the money is right — was appealing for him precisely because of its skeezier dimensions. "You can be Mr. In-Between. You can go left or right. You have more jokers up your sleeve. You're more free. It's fun."

Haller's character has his origins in a series of novels by Michael Connelly, but McConaughey says he didn't feel any pressure to live up to what was on the page.

"I didn't think about expectations. My initial thoughts were based on what Michael Connelly wrote, and then when it goes to script form, you obviously end up losing some of what's in the book. But I thought the essence was still there in the script, and Michael feels the same way, which is nice to hear. That's the best compliment I can give (the film)."

McConaughey says he was also very pleased with the film's soundtrack, which rolls '70s soul and contemporary hip-hop into one swaggering package.

"(Director) Brad Furman has a really good ear for hip-hop. He wanted to go old-school, to get that feeling of the streets, and I loved that. This is not the usual soundtrack for these kinds of movies, and think it contemporizes the story while also making it a throwback. It's the sound of the streets, of downtown L.A."

Despite being a longtime Los Angeles resident, McConaughey says he was a little thrown by the hometown shoot. "Ninety per cent of the places we were at I'd never seen before," he laughs.

Movie review See it twice ●●●●● | See it now ●●●● | Worth watching ●●● | Yawn ●● | Don't bother ●

Solid effects, action help boost Battle

Battle: Los Angeles
Genre: Action
Director: Jonathan Liebesman
Stars: Aaron Eckhart, Ramon Rodriguez, Michelle Rodriguez
●●½

Battle: Los Angeles's producers are waging their bets that audiences will get a sadistic joy out of watching Hollywood burn.

After all, in this thriller, not only do heavily armed extraterrestrials conquer Earth, but the last fortress to withstand demolition is seemingly the California coastline — thanks mostly to a platoon of marines led by a serious but disgraced sergeant (Aaron Eckhart) seeking redemption.

As for plot, that's pretty much it. The thin premise (they're after our water, apparently), dodgy dialogue and flat supporting characters don't benefit this gung-ho war movie. In fact, it's a bit too Pearl Harbor with Martians in tone. However, the action truly does get a boost from sensational special effects spun around a few genuine moments of high tension shots from the soldiers' perspective, which makes this battle nothing if not worth its kitsch value for sci-fi fans or people who simply hate L.A. ● STEVE GOW

Sweet Karma
Genre: Thriller
Director: Andrew Hunt
Stars: Shera Bechard, John Tokatlidis. Frank J. Zupancic
●●●

Model and Playboy playmate Shera Bechard is gorgeous but the movie whose title her name sits above, Sweet Karma, is not. In fact it's ugly, dark and gritty and that's exactly what it's supposed to be. Director Andrew Hunt's throwback to vigilante sexploitation flicks of the 1970s is updated with current headline-ripping human trafficking drama and delivered with style. ● CHRIS ALEXANDER

Red Riding Hood
Genre: Thriller
Director: Catherine Hardwicke
Stars: Amanda Seyfried, Lukas Haas, Gary Oldman
●●

On paper, turning Red Riding Hood into a glossy gothic horror movie isn't a bad idea. Unfortunately, beyond the impressive images the filmmakers didn't seem to know what to do with the concept. There's no point in a detailed plot description, because it doesn't make much sense. It involves a medieval town haunted by a big bad wolf, a disturbed monster hunter hired to slay the beast, and a pretty girl in a red hood with two generic love interests. ● PHIL BROWN

The Arbor
Genre: Documentary
Director: Clio Barnard
Stars: Christine Bottomley, Manjinder Virk
●●

The Arbor is nothing if not daring. The unorthodox documentary about troubled British playwright Andrea Dunbar features actors lip-synching to recorded interviews as well as staged scenes from her work to convey a portrait of the artist. Instead, however, the dubbed actors are simply distracting — a questionable choice given the self-destructive nature of Dunbar's dark life. ● STEVE GOW

And Everything Is Going Fine
Genre: Documentary
Director: Steven Soderbergh
Star: Spalding Gray
●●●½

A documentary labour of love from Steven Soderbergh honouring the great monologist Spalding Gray, who created some of the most remarkable theatre of the '70s and '80s simply by sitting in front of an audience and telling spiraling stories about his life. Gray's work is unique and Soderbergh makes no attempt to explain what made it special. Instead, he cleverly combines clips of performances, interviews and home movies from throughout Gray's career. ● PHIL BROWN

MOJITOS? IN MARCH?!
YES, MOJITOS. IN MARCH.

Metro celebrated the launch of Metro London and Metro Winnipeg on Wednesday, by serving up Metro Mojitos at the 2011 CMDC (Canadian Media Directors' Council) Conference Cocktail Party. We figured we're not the only ones who are tired of winter, so why not celebrate our new editions in London and Winnipeg with a little taste of summer?

Did you recover from feeling like this?

In the past, did you have a lengthy time of:

- Sadness nearly all day, most days
- Little interest in favourite things
- Sleeping too much or too little
- Low energy or feeling restless
- Changes in weight/appetite
- Difficulty thinking

We are interested in people who had this experience, but now feel better and are not currently taking antidepressants.

If so, you may be eligible to participate in a PET brain imaging study at the Clarke Division of the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health.

Subjects must be:

- Non-smokers
- In good health
- Not taking any medication or illicit substances

Compensation provided.
Please call (416) 535-8501 ext. 6341 and PRESS 1

Before Twitter, Sheen did films

Let's go back to a happier, simpler time, when Charlie Sheen was known primarily as an actor, and not a multimedia motor mouth who's coined such instant catchphrases as "winning" and "tiger blood," and behaved so erratically that he lost his high-paying TV gig.

For a while there — mostly in the '80s — Sheen made movies, like his father, Martin Sheen, and his brother, Emilio Estevez. Sure, he appeared in his share of idiotic comedies and action flicks, but he also delivered some strong roles and worked with some daring directors. So let's take a look at Sheen's five best performances — outside of his Twitter account or webcast Sheen's Korner, that is.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Platoon (1986)

Sheen is at the centre of Oliver Stone's Vietnam War epic — he's standing in for Stone, really — as a young man conflicted about war and his place in the world, while simultaneously being torn between two powerful superiors. The film is immediate, intense and visceral, the winner of four Academy Awards including best picture and best director. This, and the next film on the list, would make Sheen a superstar in the mid-1980s.

Wall Street (1987)

Sheen reunites with Stone for a movie that could not be more reflective of its place and time. He stars as Bud Fox, an ambitious, young stockbroker who's willing to do whatever he must to get to the top. Again, he's torn between two influential men: Michael Douglas in his Oscar-winning role as the greedy Gordon Gekko and Martin Sheen, who's also playing his on-screen father, a union leader who taught Bud to respect his blue-collar upbringing. Bud is intoxicated by his lavish new lifestyle.

Ferris Bueller's Day Off (1986)

He only had a brief part — not nearly the screen time of star Matthew Broderick or even Alan Ruck as Ferris's best friend, Cameron. But he's a pivotal force in helping Jennifer Grey, as Ferris's frustrated sister, loosen up and let go of her jealousy. Sitting in a police station with messy hair and dark circles under his eyes, he's a dangerous delinquent but also kind of sexy. Appropriately, the first word he utters to her is, "Drugs?" But by the end, he's got Grey making out with him.

Eight Men Out (1988)

John Sayles' film about how the 1919 Chicago White Sox threw the World Series is probably the best movie ever made about baseball. It's intelligent, detailed and earnest, but it may not be for everyone, since it is literally so inside baseball. Still, it placed Sheen among a tremendous ensemble cast, featuring John Cusack, David Strathairn and John Mahoney. He played centre fielder Oscar "Hap" Felsch, who initially was reluctant to go along with the scheme but soon gave in.

Major League (1989)

It seems only fitting in retrospect that Wild Thing was the song that played when Sheen's character came out of the bullpen — and that he has difficulty with control. As Rick "Wild Thing" Vaughn, Sheen did his own pitching and supposedly hit 83 mph on the radar gun. As he'd declare these days in one of his many exclamatory tweets, "Fastball!" The story of a Cleveland Indians team that plays better to avoid having the owner move them to Miami is still amusing today.

Aniston getting serious

Actress Jennifer Aniston says some non-comedy movie projects are in her future, including a film based on the true story of an all-female country-western band that formed at a Texas prison in the 1940s.

An actor who is on his game

As in his new series Endgame, Patrick Gallagher seems to have a knack for making the right moves

The way Patrick Gallagher picks TV shows, he should be picking race horses. Every show is a winner, especially with critics. Besides Glee, he's either been a regular or had memorable roles on Da Vinci's Inquest, Entourage, Men of a Certain Age and True Blood.

The Canadian producers of his latest series are hoping the B.C. native's luck holds. The 42-year-old actor is set to star opposite Shawn Doyle in Endgame, a new Vancouver-based drama premiering March 14 on Showcase.

Doyle plays Arkady Balagan, a Russian chess master who refuses to leave a luxurious Vancouver hotel after the murder of his fiancé outside the front entrance. Gallagher plays Hugo Lum, the hotel's burly head of security tasked to toss the Russian for not paying his bills.

Before you can say "checkmate," Balagan finds a way to stay solvent and not leave the premises: by solving crimes. By thinking several moves ahead, he applies his chess skills to detective work, drawing in helpers who act as his "pawns" around the hotel.

"I'm sort of his only antagonist," says Gallagher, interviewed earlier this year on the set of the series.

Doyle and Gallagher do seem to relish their playful confrontations on the set. A scene set in front of the hotel lobby elevators produces laughs as take after take finds Balagan again holding Lum in check. It's like watching a tennis game where timing is the ball and nothing is out of bounds. "We developed that really early," says Gallagher. "It's been fun."

Doyle says Gallagher is a man of "great comic abilities" and admires the risks he takes to make Lum look lame. He says the character "tries to be smart, tries to be suave and swift, and when he tries to be those things, he's even less so."

Over a relatively short career, Gallagher has acted opposite some of the biggest stars in show business. He played opposite Russell Crowe in Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World and joined Sandra Oh — whom he has known since their days studying at the National Theatre School of Canada — on the film Sideways. The box office hit Night at the Museum put him in the company of Ben Stiller, Robin Williams and Owen Wilson.

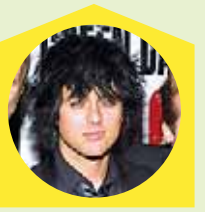
High value

Eric Clapton's 1948 Gibson L-5P guitar sold for $82,960, at an auction in New York Wednesday, well above its pre-sale estimate of $20,000 to $30,000.

Return to broadway

Green Day frontman Billie Joe Armstrong will return to the hit Broadway musical American Idiot for its final three weeks. Armstrong will return to the role he created as St. Jimmy on April 5.



Arrested

Police in Baltimore say Felicia (Snoop) Pearson, who appeared on the HBO series The Wire, is among about 30 people arrested in an early morning drug raid.

No Spidey senses

A day after a sixth delay was announced for Broadway's Spider-Man, its stars were in a cover story in The New York Post's Page Six Magazine. The lead time for the magazine is about a week.

Spielberg. WWI epic

Spielberg cooking up another war epic

Here's a Metro first look at director Steven Spielberg's next movie War Horse, which is slated to be released Dec. 28, 2011. War Horse is an epic adventure set at the outbreak of the First World War about a young boy named Albert (Jeremy Irvine) and his horse Joey. Albert's father sells Joey to the British cavalry and Albert travels to the battlefields of France to bring Joey home.

Biebs is the bait

Bieber, Bedingfield guest on Rascal Flatts' concert special

The members of Rascal Flatts hope to gain new fans with their ABC concert special. And they've got the perfect bait: Justin Bieber.

Turns out music's biggest heartthrob is a fan of the trio.

"It's funny because his mom turned him on to us," singer Gary LeVox said.

"He wrote something about being a fan of ours in his book. So (his camp) just reached out to us and said, 'We have a song, That Should Be Me, and we wanted to see if you guys would be interested in doing it.'"

Saturday night's special, Rascal Flatts: Nothing Like This Presented by JC Penney, will feature a never-seen clip from the video for That Should Be Me and behind-the-scenes footage of its making.

"He's such a talented kid," bassist Jay DeMarcus said.

"He really is. He's wildly talented. He plays about 14 different instruments and he sings all day long. It's just really, really inspiring to see somebody so fired up and focused on music because he's eaten alive with it."

LeVox is familiar with the demographic Bieber draws. His young daughters are fans of the 17-year-old phenom and LeVox made sure they got to meet him.

"I wouldn't have been able to go home," he said.

Sara Evans emerges Stronger after hiatus

Sara Evans says she's never one to make an autobiographical album. Yet you can't blame listeners for reading between the lines on her latest single, A Little Bit Stronger.

It deals with a woman slowly getting over a busted relationship and emerging stronger for the ordeal — a lot like what has happened to Evans over the past five years.

LARRY BUSACCA/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Sara Evans

She went through a very public divorce that forced her to pull out of Dancing With The Stars in 2006. Suddenly a single mom, she wasn't sure what her future would hold. How would she continue her career with three children to raise mostly alone?

Sounds just like the song, doesn't it?

"People say, 'A Little Bit Stronger is totally about you,' and I'm like, 'It's really not,'" Evans said. "(Lady Antebellum's) Hillary Scott, Hillary Lindsey and Luke Laird wrote it. It's more about (Scott's) life. It's her story about a breakup that she went through, and I thought it was just such a fabulous song that I can totally take it on."

A Little Bit Stronger is the show-stopper on the 40-year-old's latest album out this week.

Autobiographical or not, Evans has emerged from her divorce a stronger woman with the kind of life she had trouble imagining after the divorce.

A mutual friend set her up with former Alabama quarterback Jay Barker and the two fell in love in five weeks. She married him and moved to Birmingham where the couple now live with their blended family of seven children.

"I'm now completely at peace and I feel like I'm at home with Jay," Evans said. "It sort of feels like we knew each other as kids or something then didn't see each other and reunited. It's a bizarre thing how connected we were instantly."

Moore set to play Palin

Julianne Moore is set to play former vice-presidential candidate Sarah Palin in an upcoming TV film.

HBO Films said Wednesday that Moore will star in the film Game Change, which follows John McCain's 2008 presidential campaign from when he chose Palin as his running mate through their defeat in the general election. The film is based on the bestselling book of the same name.

No other cast members were announced, and HBO did not say when production on the film might begin.

▶ Lubna Azabal poses with her Genie award for Performance by an Actress in a Leading Role for Incendies at the 31st Genie Awards in Ottawa on Thursday.

Incendies tops Genies

The drama won a leading eight awards Barney's Version takes seven

Denis Villeneuve's Oscar-nominated saga "Incendies" blazed through the Genie Awards to claim Canada's top film prizes Thursday, clinching wins for best film, best director, best adapted screenplay and best actress.

Last year, the soft-spoken Quebec director swept the field with his haunting, black-and-white rendering of the Montreal massacre, "Polytechnique."

Despite the back-to-back triumphs, Villeneuve bemoaned a lack of support for francophone films in English Canada.

"Last year I won for 'Polytechnique.' I won nine Genie awards. I made the front page everywhere in Quebec. But here, in the Globe and Mail, I was just beside dead people, at the end of the last page," Villeneuve said on the red carpet before the trophies were handed out.

"Barney's Version," the cinematic adaptation of Mordecai Richler's sprawling final novel, followed close behind "Incendies" with seven prizes, including acting trophies for stars Paul Giamatti, Dustin Hoffman and Minnie Driver.

The Hollywood heavyweights were notably absent at the ceremony, leaving the presenters to accept the trophies on their behalf.

Giamatti took the best actor prize for his portrayal of curmudgeonly, hockey-mad protagonist Barney Panofsky, widely seen as an alter-ego of Richler himself. In January, the "Sideways" star also won a Golden Globe for the role, using his acceptance speech to profess his love for Canada and Montreal, where the film was shot.

"I'm very very sorry not to be there in person this evening," Giamatti said in a statement read by co-star Rachelle Lefevre.

"To be acknowledged in the country that produced this great film, the tremendous novel it's based on and the uniquely brilliant Mordecai Richler, is pleasing and moving to me beyond words."

Keeping an eye on female movie makers

Female Eye Film Festival spotlights international talent

ELIZABETH BEDDALL
@METRONEWS.CA

The film Amazon Falls opens in the waiting room of a Hollywood audition, where a veteran B-movie actress and a starry-eyed Hollywood newcomer await their call to read for a hokey sci-fi flick.

The veteran offers her protégée a piece of advice she's held onto as a player in the film industry: "Never forget your girls."

This vow of sisterly support lends itself perfectly to the Toronto's Female Eye Film Festival, and is perhaps the reason why Amazon Falls was chosen as the film that will be kicking off the five-day celebration on March 16.

Established in 2001, it is Ontario's one and only annual, international and independent film festival that solely showcases films directed by women.

HANDOUT

▶ Director Katrin Bowen

"These festivals are a way of checking in with your girls," says Amazon Falls director Katrin Bowen. "They encourage me because I realize so many of my fellow women are out there making films and it just creates a great energy. There's no whining, just celebrating. "

Now in its ninth year, this year's festival will offer a stellar lineup of female-fronted features screened at Toronto's Carlton and Rainbow cinemas peppered by script readings, industry panel discussions, lectures and, of course, a party or two.

"I'm excited that we seem to have broken through in terms of international recognition as a reputable festival," says Leslie Ann Coles, founder and director of the festival. "I've also been excited to see film festivals dedicated to women directors popping up all over the world. I think there's 35 now. When I began, I believe it was more like 11."

Coles points to the festival's Best in the Biz series as one of many events to keep an eye out for during the week. Created with the intention of honouring some of the current industry's most influential females, this year's public galas will see Canadian filmmaker Mary Harron, director of such films as American Psycho and I Shot Andy Warhol, presented with the Honourary Director Award while Toronto-based producer, casting director and writer Anna Tait will be honoured with the festival's Maverick Award.

Additional information about screenings, events and tickets can be found by going online to femaleeyefestival.com.

If you're anywhere in the vicinity of Toronto, you'll know that the city has been taken over by a mob of musicians and music fans who, by this time, are hung over and extremely sleep-deprived.

Such are the rituals of Canadian Music Week. With more than 800 acts from all over the planet in the midst of a five-day gigging marathon, the greatest challenge (next to preserving liver function) is figuring out which acts to see. Here are a few more recommendations for the home stretch from Friday until Sunday night.

Searching for entertainment for the family over March break? Look no further.

Famous PEOPLE Players (FPP), Toronto's black light dinner theatre company, is putting on a special March break show, Hitch on to a Dream, running from March 15 to 19. There will be a St. Patrick's Day show on March 17.

Shows include a three-course dinner (or lunch depending on the day) in a Moulin Rouge-style dining room, a black light musical in FPP's Phil Collins Theatre, and a reception of coffee, tea and desserts to end the affair.

FPP has made guest appearances on the television show 7th Heaven and performed for the audiences of Regis and Kathy Lee and Good Morning America.

New boyfriend said to be enabling Aguilera's partying since her divorce

With a divorce, flubbing the National Anthem at the Super Bowl and getting arrested for public intoxication, it hasn't been a great few months for Christina Aguilera, and some close to the singer think she's spiraling out of control, according to Star magazine.

"Christina's lost her confidence since she split from Jordan (Bratman.)" a source says. "She gets terribly sad, and that's when all the awful memories come flooding back and she ends up numbing herself with booze and food."

Friends also think Aguilera's new boyfriend, Matt Rutler, is "an enabler" and isn't helping matters. Rutler was arrested alongside Aguilera earlier this month.

"She needs to get help before something even more serious happens"

Lohan turns down a new plea deal

PEOPLE. The day before she was due back in court for her felony theft charge, Lindsay Lohan rejected a plea deal made by the district attorney, sending her case to trial, according to Radar Online.

"Judge Keith Schwartz indicated he would give Lindsay less than the six months the DA was seeking, if she pleaded in front of him," a source tells the website. "(Lohan's lawyer) Shawn Holley was asking for no jail time, but the judge said he would sentence her to a minimum of 60 days, but likely not longer than 90 days." Lohan is accused of stealing a $2,500 necklace from a jewelry store.

Schwartz reportedly "encouraged Holly to discuss what not taking the plea deal will mean for her," according to the source. METRO

Keeping the future king in line

PEOPLE. Kate Middleton is getting ready to walk down the aisle with Prince William and live happily ever after, and author Christopher Anderson says it's William who should be the most grateful.

"(Princes William and Harry) do drink a lot," Anderson tells Popeater. "That's where Kate comes in. One of the great jobs she's been able to perform is pulling William back from the edge a bit. You always see them coming out of those bars, and he always looks completely smashed, and she's in good shape. She never over imbibes, she's always in control, and before she leaves the club she goes and makes herself up in the ladies room so that not a hair is out of place. She's always been a pillar of strength for him." METRO

Around the world with Guinness

PETER ROCKWELL
LIQUIDASSETS@EASTLINK.CA
TWITTER: @THEREALWINEGUY

Believe it or not, more than one million pints of Guinness stout will be drunk across Canada this coming St. Patrick's Day.

If you think you're missing something in your glass because you're not having one in Ireland, you're wrong. If I learned one thing during my trip there last fall, it was that Guinness tastes the same from a tap in Belfast, Galway, Cork and Dublin as it does from anywhere in our country.

What you might have trouble believing is that the liquid inside a can of Guinness Draught (4 x 440 ml, $10.95 to $12.49) also tastes the same as a freshly poured pint from any tavern on the Emerald Isle.

Save your emails, beer geeks. I drank my body weight in the stuff during my week-long trip — including one at the bar on top of the brewery itself — and couldn't tell the difference.

It's the nitrogen laden widget floating inside that allows the beer to keep its true Irish personality. Released when the can is opened the gas gives the brew its thick head and fresh-from-the-tap flavour. Sláinte!

Be a winner in the kitchen — literally

Recreate the impressive bison tenderloin that won Jean-Francois Daigle the title of Canadian Regional S. Pellegrino Almost Famous Chef

DINNER EXPRESS

EMILY RICHARDS
FOOD@METRONEWS.CA

Last month, a fast-paced, high-pressure cooking competition saw eight culinary students from across the country compete for the title of Canadian Regional S. Pellegrino Almost Famous Chef.

And the winner was Jean-Francois Daigle of Toronto's George Brown College. He wowed the judges with all the right kitchen moves and, of course, his dish — Honey Seared Bison Tenderloin with Apple Parsnip Purée.

With this coveted title, Daigle, and nine other regional winners from across North America, will compete during the three-day finals in Napa Valley, Calif, which start today.

In front of a panel of food media, distinguished guests and renowned chefs, the competitors will show off their creations.

The overall winner will take the title, up to $20,000 and a paid apprenticeship from one of the participating judges.

"I feel very humbled to have won this competition against the great talent of my fellow competitors," says Daigle.

"Although I was nervous presenting to the judges, I believed in my vision. I've learned from a number of great chefs and it's this learning that helped me achieve this honour."

Check out Daigle's winning recipe and try getting creative in your own kitchen this weekend.

▶ A creamy apple-parsnip purée is the base for the decadent richness of the bison.

Honey Seared Bison Tenderloin with Apple Parsnip Purée by Jean-Francois Daigle

Preparation:

1. Apple Parsnip Purée: In a pot of boiling water, cook parsnips, covered, for 15 minutes or until tender. Add apples, cover and simmer for 10 minutes or until very tender. Drain and puree in a food processor until smooth. Whisk in cream and mustard and season to taste with salt and pepper; keep warm.
2. Meanwhile, in saucepan bring stock, wine, carrots, celery, onion, bay leaves and peppercorns to a boil. Simmer until reduced to 2-1/2 cups (625 mL). Remove bay leaves and discard.
3. Sprinkle tenderloin with salt and pepper. Heat oil in large skillet, in batches sear both sides of the tenderloin and place on lightly greased baking sheet. Drizzle with honey and sprinkle with thyme. Roast in 425 F (220 C) oven for 5 to 7 minutes or until meat thermometer inserted in centre reaches 145 F (63 C) for medium-rare.
4. Spoon apple parsnip puree in centre of plate and top with tenderloin and spoon vegetable sauce around plate.

Get sweet on pork

Mixing the sweetness of fruit with meat can be tricky, but this recipe makes it easy with a blueberry ketchup

Sometimes, the wintertime blues can be just what the doctor ordered, especially if they're the kind that grow on bushes.

Besides being a delicious addition to your diet, blueberries have been linked to numerous health benefits. And the good news is that it doesn't seem to matter whether you consume fresh, frozen or even dried blueberries.

Of course, it's easiest to eat blueberries out of hand or sprinkled over yogurt or cereal (just 40 calories per 125-ml/1/2-cup serving), but they also make an excellent addition to cooked dishes, and not just the usual desserts and baked goods.

Blueberries can have a savoury side, too.

Consider adding fresh or dried blueberries to your stuffing next time you roast a chicken or turkey. They even make a surprising addition to a meat loaf or burger, especially when blended with ingredients such as onions and Dijon mustard

For this recipe, blueberries are cooked down with chopped onion, minced fresh ginger and white balsamic vinegar to make a sweet and tangy ketchup to accompany lean pork tenderloin. But the ketchup would go just as well on top of a burger.

The technique for cooking the pork calls for dredging the medallions in seasoned instant-blend flour because it creates a beautiful golden crust. But in a pinch, you can always use regular all-purpose flour instead.

Pork Medallions With Blueberry-Balsamic Ketchup

Preparation:

1. Blueberry-balsamic ketchup: In a medium saucepan over medium-high, combine blueberries, brown sugar, onion, vinegar, ginger and salt. Heat, stirring constantly, until sugar has dissolved. Adjust heat so blueberry mix is vigorously simmering and cook, stirring occasionally, until blueberries have popped and the ketchup has thickened slightly, 20 minutes (the ketchup will thicken more as it cools). Remove from heat; set aside.
2. Pork: In a shallow wide bowl or pie plate, whisk together flour, thyme, pepper and salt. Slice pork tenderloin on the diagonal into 2.5-cm (1-inch) thick medallions.
3. In a 30-cm (12-inch) non-stick skillet over medium-high, heat oil.
4. Working in batches, dredge pork medallions through flour mixture, then place them in the hot skillet. Cook pork until golden-brown and no longer pink at the centre, 4 to 6 minutes per side. Serve pork medallions immediately, topped with blueberry-balsamic ketchup.

Tip: This recipe makes more blueberry-balsamic ketchup than you will need. Don't worry, it's delicious on just about any red meat, including in place of classic ketchup on burgers.

Washington in bloom

Cherry Blossom Festival runs March 26 to April 10
The cherry trees in Washington were a gift from Japan 99 years ago

A National Park Service expert is predicting an early bloom for Washington's cherry blossoms, with warm temperatures already speeding the buds toward full bloom in late March.

Chief horticulturist Rob DeFeo said yesterday he believes the pink and white flowers will be at their best from March 29 to April 3, though the flowers can be seen in the days before and after those dates. The full bloom is predicted to fall in the middle of the National Cherry Blossom Festival, which runs March 26 to April 10.

The average peak bloom date is April 4, according to the Park Service, so the first blossoms may come early this year.

"I look at the buds and it's like a pregnancy," DeFeo said of his prediction. "They go through these five stages — and the only variable is the temperature."

The Yoshino cherry trees are among "the oldest, most reliable things in the nation's capital," said DeFeo, adding that he has predicted the peak bloom dates correctly for 16 of the last 19 years.

DeFeo said the cherry trees are healthy. About 100 of the original 3,000 trees delivered from Japan in 1912 are still growing, while more than 2,900 have been replaced over time. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Festival

For the first time this year, there will be a charge for one of the festival events — the Sakura Matsuri Japanese Street Festival.

Size The festival has grown to be the largest Japanese festival in the United States.

Visitors The event drew about 150,000 visitors last year and is held during the festival's final weekend.

Playoff push takes a blow

- Claude Giroux scores winner as Flyers edge lifeless Maple Leafs
- Saturday's game against Sabres becomes a must-win situation

▶ Luke Schenn delivers a stiff shot to Philadelphia centre Jeff Carter Thursday night.

The Toronto Maple Leafs appear to be running out of gas.

Claude Giroux's second-period goal stood up as the winner Thursday as the Philadelphia Flyers edged the Maple Leafs 3-2.

It was the third loss in as many games for a Toronto team that didn't have much jump despite its current playoff chase. The Leafs entered the night trailing the eighth-place Buffalo Sabres and Carolina Hurricanes by four points in the standings and failed to gain any ground.

Andrej Meszaros and Darroll Powe also scored for Philadelphia (42-19-6), which was without top defenceman Chris Pronger because of an undisclosed upper-body injury.

3	2
FLYERS	LEAFS

Mikhail Grabovski and Joffrey Lupul replied for the Maple Leafs (29-29-10).

At a time when questionable hits have dominated discussion around the NHL, referees Mike Leggo and Brian Pochmara came down hard on Leafs defenceman Mike Komisarek. Less than four minutes into the game, he was given a five-minute boarding penalty and game misconduct for shoving Daniel Carcillo into the boards from behind.

Meszaros opened the scoring on the ensuing power play by blasting home his sixth of the season at 4:55.

Toronto was fortunate to emerge otherwise unscathed from that situation, with goalie James Reimer making a great pad stop on Jeff Carter while the Flyers built an early 8-1 shots advantage.

The rookie goaltender would like the second goal back.

Powe got his sixth of the season at 9:36 of the second period after squirting a low shot from an awkward angle along the goal-line between Reimer's legs.

Indiana (27-37) hopes to change its bad fortune in Toronto, having lost the its last four games at Air Canada Centre.

Toronto (17-47) is mired in a three game skid and could be ready to embrace its role as playoff spoiler. The Raptors, coming off a 96-94 loss at home to Utah Wednesday, are losers in 23 of their last 27 games.

Heat too much like a video game: Phil Jackson

Phil Jackson has another thought on the Miami Heat: He doesn't like how they play.

Speaking Thursday before his Los Angeles Lakers visited Miami, Jackson likened the way the Heat play to an Xbox video game and said they rely too much on one-on-one basketball.

"I'm not a big fan of the style that Miami plays," Jackson said. "I like to see everybody involved in the game."

It was just the latest public statement from Jackson on the Heat, a list that includes how their roster was assembled last summer and Heat coach Erik Spoelstra saying Miami had some players "crying" in the locker room after a loss to Chicago earlier this week.

Jackson also questioned Spoelstra's job security earlier this year, then quickly apologized for that remark.

"He's doing a good job," said Jackson, a winner of 11 NBA titles as a coach, including the last two with the Lakers. "He's going to be fine."

Asked Thursday if he took interest in how Miami was coming together as a team, especially with all the interest in how LeBron James, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh came together last summer, Jackson paused for a brief moment.

He said he enjoys watching teams like San Antonio and Boston and the styles those teams play.

The Heat? Not so much, especially since there are long stretches where most of Miami's offence revolves around two or three players at the most, instead of the get-everyone-involved-when-possible approach Jackson prefers.

A history of on-ice violence

1969

Ted Green of Boston and Wayne Maki of St. Louis were both acquitted after a stick swinging incident that left Green with a fractured skull.

1976

Philadelphia Flyers Joe Watson, Don Saleski and Bob Kelly found guilty of assault in fight-filled game in Toronto.

1988

Dino Ciccarelli of the Minnesota North Stars attacked Toronto rookie Luke Richardson with his stick. Ciccarelli was later convicted of assault, sentenced to one day in jail and fined $1,000.

2000

Marty McSorley of the Boston Bruins slammed his stick onto the head of Vancouver Canucks forward Donald Brashear, knocking him unconscious. McSorley was found guilty of assault with a weapon and sentenced to 18 months probation. The NHL suspended him for one year.

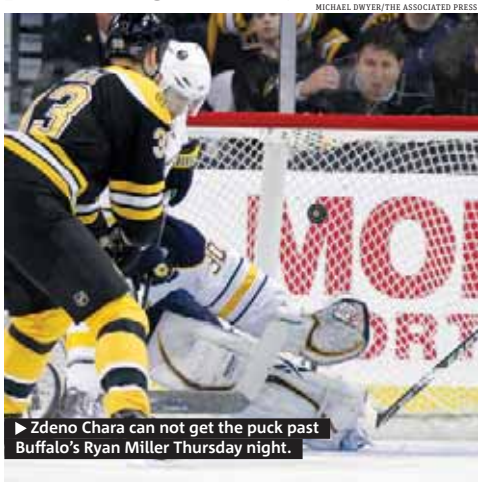
2004

Late in the third period, Todd Bertuzzi of the Canucks punched Steve Moore of the Colorado Avalanche to the ice from behind and then fell on him, pushing his head into the ice. Moore suffered three fractured vertebrae and a concussion and has not played since. Bertuzzi pled guilty to assault and was sentenced to one year of probation and 80 days of community service.

Bettman not backing down on head hits

Commissioner says Pacioretty injury horrific but part of the game ● Injured Canadien leaves hospital

MICHAEL DWYER/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS



▶ Zdeno Chara can not get the puck past Buffalo's Ryan Miller Thursday night.

NHL commissioner Gary Bettman took a tough stance Thursday in the face of a mounting outcry about violence in professional hockey following a brutal check that's left a Montreal Canadien with a severe concussion and a fractured vertebra in his neck.

In the U.S. capital for a series of hockey-related events, Bettman cautioned against "over-legislating" head hits in the wake of the punishing smash into the boards meted out to Max Pacioretty by Boston Bruins captain Zdeno Chara in a game earlier this week.

The NHL has decided not to suspend Chara.

"Our hockey operations people are extraordinarily comfortable with the decision that they made," Bettman told reporters following a panel discussion on Capitol Hill on the state of the game in the United States.

"It was a horrific injury, we're sorry that it happened in our fast-paced physical game, but I don't think whether or not supplemental discipline was imposed would change what happened and in fact the people in the game who I have heard from almost to a person ... believe that it was handled appropriately by hockey operations." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Developments

By the end of the day Thursday, Max Pacioretty had left hospital.

- Pacioretty expressed his disappointment that the NHL hadn't suspended Zdeno Chara but added: "I have no desire to see him prosecuted legally."
- Montreal police have opened a criminal investigation into the hit, acting on a recommendation from Quebec's chief prosecutor.

Police seek Patriot after shooting

NFL. Police in Orlando want to talk to New England Patriots safety Brandon Meriweather about a shooting that injured two men outside a bar near his hometown, authorities said Thursday.

The 27-year-old player was at the shooting in the early morning hours of Feb. 28 in Apopka, Fla., Orange County Sheriff's department spokesman Capt. Angelo Nieves said at a news conference.

Commish won't speak to Van Gundy

NBA. Commissioner David Stern says he doesn't plan to talk to Orlando coach Stan Van Gundy about critical remarks Van Gundy made about him — he will speak to Magic team executives about the comments.

Stern made his remarks Thursday during an interview on ESPN Radio in response to comments Van Gundy made earlier this week in defence of Magic centre Dwight Howard.

Bulls without Boozer again

NBA. Chicago Bulls forward Carlos Boozer is day-to-day with a sprained left ankle and could be out for as much as a week.

Coach Tom Thibodeau said Thursday that the power forward could be out "anywhere from a couple days to a week" after he was injured in the fourth quarter of Wednesday's 101-84 win at Charlotte. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

OUR SUBTLE SPEED

Opinion

SCOTT RUSSELL
FIELD OF PLAY

It's a sport taken for granted.

Of all the icy disciplines it's the most traditional and also guaranteed to deliver medal success when the Olympics roll around.

Speedskating is bred in the bone in Canada.

This weekend, the long trackers hunt for the world single distance championships on the oval at Inzell, Germany.

For the first time, Inzell will have a roof overhead, which will detract from the allure of the place. But the newly minted indoor track will ensure that the best of the best claim the crown without Mother Nature throwing a wrench in the works.

The Canadian to watch is Christine Nesbitt of London. For the past two seasons and more the Olympic gold medallist at 1,000 metres has dominated the middle distances. She's done it again in spite of an off-season cycling accident severely injuring one of her arms.

Nesbitt joins a long line of Canadian greats that includes Catriona Le May Doan, Cindy Klassen, Kristina Groves and Clara Hughes. In spite of all her successes, Nesbitt still bears the brunt of an expectant nation that says winning most of the time isn't good enough.

The burden for Nesbitt is that she's supposed to win every time out. In the all-around championships at Calgary she came close to the top of the podium, a heroic effort for a skater not used to going the distance.

In Sheffield, England, the short trackers are also racing for world titles this weekend. This rock 'n' roll, roller derby on ice is an ultra-Canadian thing and since the 1992 Games in Albertville, when it became a full medal sport, Canadian athletes have produced 25 Olympic medals.

Marianne St-Gelais and Charles Hamelin will lead the charge in the U.K. as they did in Vancouver and there will be plenty of spills and thrills and more than a little controversy. Such is the nature of short-track speedskating where athletes achieve such high velocity in extremely tight confines.

Steve Armitage will call every race for CBC, the timeless voice. He will deliver the goods, excitement and drama.

Just like the athletes who have produced 22 of the 50 medals won by Canadians at the Torino and Vancouver Olympics combined.

All of which makes Canada the first nation of speedskating and that's something to be proud of.

BLUE JAYS SPRING TRAINING

No need for Davis to steal

Toronto speedy outfielder Rajai Davis showed he has some power, too.

Davis went 3 for 4 with a home run and three RBIs for the Blue Jays in a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins Thursday.

The five-foot-10, 195-pound Davis stole 50 bases — second most in the AL — for the Oakland Athletics last season before coming to the Blue Jays in a November trade for a pair of minor leaguers. Davis doesn't have a steal yet this spring, but he has two homers. He's hitting .292 with two walks and four RBIs in 23 at-bats in exhibition games.

"I just think I've been able to be more consistent," Davis said.

Davis batted first Thursday, but Blue Jays manager John Farrell has yet to decide where Davis will be on opening day.

Stoughton, Martin, Howard and Gushue lock up playoff spots

No surprise teams this time around.

The favourites came through in round-robin play this week at the Tim Hortons Brier. Now it's just a matter of figuring out the playoff seeds.

Manitoba's Jeff Stoughton, Alberta's Kevin Martin, Ontario's Glenn Howard and Brad Gushue of Newfoundland and Labrador have locked up playoff spots. Northern Ontario was the only rink with a chance to crack the top four entering Thursday's games, but was a long shot at best.

Skip Brad Jacobs did his part with a 6-1 victory over New Brunswick's James Grattan Thursday afternoon, but Northern Ontario was eliminated when Martin knocked off Jamie Koe of the Northwest Territories/Yukon 7-6. Jacobs, a surprise entry in the playoffs last year, could only watch as Martin hit a clutch double-raise takeout to score two in the final end for the win.

"It was probably the only shot I made that game," said Martin.

Stoughton defeated Quebec's Francois Gagne 8-4 to move into first place at 9-2. Martin, Howard and Gushue were tied at 8-2 entering the final round-robin draw.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Playoff format

The winner of Friday's 1-2 playoff game advances to the final.

The loser will play in the semifinal Saturday night against the winner of the 3-4 game from earlier that day for a spot in the final.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20
Don't let others know what is going on in that busy brain of yours today. The Sun in Pisces at this time of year tends to make you more secretive.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You won't be disappointed if someone let's you down today because you weren't keen on what you were going to do together anyway. If you have free time, use it well.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Success in any worthwhile endeavour comes to those who know what they want and how to go about getting it. There are no shortcuts to the goal you have set yourself but because it is clear in your mind you'll reach it eventually.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22
Make sure your mind is occupied today. It means you are less likely to dwell on doubts and fears that might hold you back. The game of life is easy. It's only people's silly insecurities that make it seem tough.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 Someone will delight in telling you what you are doing wrong today and you won't be happy about it. Who are they to point out your failings? Well, they know what they are talking about.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Sometimes, you can be too trusting and the planets warn you should think twice before giving anyone the benefit of the doubt today. Do they have evidence to back up their claims?

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Let other people run around after you for a change. You've done more than your share of errands in recent days, so put up your feet and take things easy today and over the weekend.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 It will pay you to seek advice today, especially if you have to do something you have never done before. Confidence won't be enough, so be realistic and get help from the experts.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Not all is what it seems at the moment, so don't be too trusting and don't put all your eggs in one basket. One of the better times of the year is not far away, so there is no need to take any chances.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20
Stay calm and don't let anything get to you. Your emotions are close to the surface and that could spell trouble if you overreact to something that most other times you would not even notice.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18
You seem to have doubts about a project on which you were keen a little while ago. Maybe it's your sixth sense warning you that it's not a good idea. You should listen.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Others are entitled to their opinions, but you call the shots. The more they say you're on the wrong track, the more you'll enjoy proving them wrong. SALLY BROMPTON
